

Context: In class we have been discussing the Constitution of the United States. We went over the Bill of Rights: the first ten amendments of the Constitution.

Task: In a writing task of at least five paragraphs, including an introduction and a conclusion, identify and explain which are the three most important amendments.

Documents: The Bill of Rights distributed in class.

Due Date: _____

Organ-ization	Uses features of organized writing to create cohesion among claims and sophisticated analysis. Clearly presents an introduction to the topic and provides a concluding section.	Uses features of organized writing to create cohesion among claims and analysis. Introduction and conclusion are both included.	Presents a partial introduction and/or a concluding sentence.	Does not write a clear introduction and may only attempt a closing sentence that drifts from the topic.
Amend-ments	More than three amendments are discussed as important.	Three amendments are discussed as important.	Two amendments are discussed as important.	Less than two amendments are discussed as important.
Analysis	Thorough and thoughtful justification for each amendment discussed. Citing evidence and hypothetical experience.	Justification for each amendment discussed. Citing evidence or hypothetical experience.	Some justification for most amendments discussed. Hypothetical experience included.	Little justification for importance of amendments
PUGS	No mistakes.	Less than three mistakes	Less than seven mistakes	More than six mistakes.

Context: In class we have been discussing the Constitution of the United States. We went over the Bill of Rights: the first ten amendments of the Constitution.

Task: In a writing task of at least five paragraphs, including an introduction and a conclusion, identify and explain which are the three most important amendments.

Documents: The Bill of Rights distributed in class.

Due Date: _____

Organ-ization	Uses features of organized writing to create cohesion among claims and sophisticated analysis. Clearly presents an introduction to the topic and provides a concluding section.	Uses features of organized writing to create cohesion among claims and analysis. Introduction and conclusion are both included.	Presents a partial introduction and/or a concluding sentence.	Does not write a clear introduction and may only attempt a closing sentence that drifts from the topic.
Amend-ments	More than three amendments are discussed as important.	Three amendments are discussed as important.	Two amendments are discussed as important.	Less than two amendments are discussed as important.
Analysis	Thorough and thoughtful justification for each amendment discussed. Citing evidence and hypothetical experience.	Justification for each amendment discussed. Citing evidence or hypothetical experience.	Some justification for most amendments discussed. Hypothetical experience included.	Little justification for importance of amendments
PUGS	No mistakes.	Less than three mistakes	Less than seven mistakes	More than six mistakes.